JHAJJAR, DECEMBER 12

Emerging quickly as "Power Hub" with two mega power generating projects, Jharli village of this district has achieved yet another milestone with the vital decision of establishing a cement plant on its soil by JK Laxmi Cement.

S. Chokse, director of the company, has recently shot off a missive to MP from Rohtak Deepender Hooda in this regard wherein he has mentioned that Haryana is one of the developed states of the country and it is a matter of proud for the company to set up its cement plant here.

"The entire Haryana state has been marching ahead in the field of industrial development. In Jharli, on commissioning of two power projects having electricity generation capacity of 1,500 MW and 1,320 MW, a number of downstream projects will also come up," the MP said, adding that following the industrial-friendly policies of the state government, Haryana had become a preferred destination for investment.
